

Welcome to Cockney London

1 Reading

Are you thinking of visiting London? Don't just go to the obvious tourist attractions. Why not explore... Cockney London!

KINGS AND QUEENS

People born in the East End of London are called Cockneys. The East End of London is one of the poorest parts of London but it has a rich history. The writer Charles Dickens set his novel Oliver Twist in the East End and Conan Doyle's detective Sherlock Holmes investigated lots of murders there too.

But in the East End you will also find lots of Kings and Queens! They are the Pearly Kings and Queens of the East End. These men and women wear suits covered with tiny pearl buttons. It is a tradition that started in 1875 with a young orphan called Henry Croft who worked in the local market. He liked the clothes that the fruit and vegetable sellers wore – all their clothes had little pearl buttons as decoration. They were also very kind and if anyone was in trouble or needed money, they helped them. Henry decided to raise money for his orphanage. He covered his whole suit in pearl buttons and people gave him money. Later, many hospitals and churches asked Henry to help them raise money and he did. He raised more than £5000 (a lot of money in those days).

Today the tradition continues and each part of London has a Pearly King and Queen who raise money for charity. If you visit London on the first Sunday in October or the third Sunday in May and go to Trafalgar Square, you will see all the Pearly Kings and Queens together.

2 Vocabulary

What did you say?!

There is a special language in the East End of London called Cockney Rhyming Slang. Many people think it started in the local markets when thieves and pickpockets wanted to talk to each other in a secret code.

This is how it works:

Use two words that have a meaning, for example fish hook or apples and pears or Mickey Mouse. The second word should rhyme with the word you want to say:

fish hook = book

apples and pears = stairs

Mickey Mouse = house

When you speak, you only use the first word of the rhyme:

I like this fish = I like this book

Walk up the apples = Walk up the stairs

Is that your Mickey? = is that your house?

Easy?! Try matching these rhyming slang pairs with their meaning.

April showers	money
plates of meat	head
Britney Spears	mate
rabbit and pork	flowers
dog and bone	tears
loaf of bread	feet
teapot lids	phone
china plate	kids
bread and honey	talk

Can you work out what this person is saying?

I'm at my Mickey when the dog rings. It is my teapots. They want some bread so they can buy their mum some Aprils.

3 Speaking and writing

Quiz

In your team, write down three sentences using Cockney Rhyming Slang e.g. 'You have big plates' (You have big feet). Now, test your classmates! Stand up at the front of the class and read out your sentences. The first team to 'translate' your sentence wins a point. Good luck!
